Keynote Address:

The COVID-19 pandemic disrupted the world as we knew it in 2019-2020 affecting lives and livelihoods across the globe. It forced citizens and countries to find creative ways of living through lockdowns. Most significantly, it catapulted the world into the digital economy (just to stay connected and to survive) that has led to innovative business solutions, and a new appreciation for geographic risk. It was the calamity of this pandemic that gave rise to the Global Technology & Business Services Council – a platform for global leadership in the Technology and Business Services sector, in a time of crisis and thereafter.

This keynote address examines the impact of COVID-19 on countries and the global economy, it touches on the role of innovation in times of crises and opportunity and sets the scene for the need for greater leadership and cross-regional collaboration than ever before.

This will be centred around new global research undertaken for GT&BSC by its research partner, Everest.

The GT&BSC – Global Collaboration for a Better Future

14:35PM – 15:20PM

The global technology and business services industry delivers strategic value through a global eco-system comprised of over 10 million highly skilled and talented workers around the world, operating flexibly, transparently and collaboratively and utilising best practices to deliver thought leadership, technology-led transformation and continuous business improvement. It is recognised as a significant positive contributor to the global economy and will be a major contributor to re-energizing many economies worldwide.

This final discussion of day one presents the vision of the GT&BSC and describes its role in: sharing best practice, challenges and opportunities, trends; and creating forums to develop new thinking and new models, in doing so strengthening each local association to further strengthen and coordinate the global technology and business services industry. The additional events in the series will be announced.

We have had the view of the multinationals that consume technology and business services, but do the views of the providers of these services align to those of their customers? Leaders of the major service providers from around the world will share their views on their own and the industry's futures. Recruitment companies, real estate players, customer service organisations, as well as traditional IT service providers, will take to the stage to share their rework and even reinvention stories.

This session will finish with a panel discussion to look at how service providers of all sizes and disciplines are recalibrating for resilience – for both themselves and for their customers. For some these are minor pivots for others full scale re-engineering of their traditional business models, leading to the long-awaited advent of service provider 2.0. Learn what the service provider of tomorrow will look like and understand how to better engage with them.
